*Defined by Monitor, community services are provided outside of hospitals in community settings, including in people's homes and in community clinics. Community services have a number of objectives, including promoting health and healthy behaviours, supporting people to manage long-term conditions, and providing treatment in a person's home or in the community to avoid hospital or residential care where possible.

These include, for example: community nursing, end-of-life care, health visiting, school nursing, intermediate care, physiotherapy, occupational therapy, speech and language therapy, podiatry, sexual health services, specialist services (eg MDTs treating musculoskeletal conditions).
